Overview. Recording sessions for Waterloo began on 24 September 1973 with the track "Dance (While the Music Still Goes On)". This song was unusual in that it is the only ABBA track not to feature member Benny Andersson on keyboards, but instead featured American pianist John Rabbit Bundrick who was in Sweden at the time. Bundrick, however, was not credited on the album.

Here We Go Again, was released last year. Later that year, it was announced that the band had recorded two new songs after 35 years of being inactive, named I Still Have Faith in You and Don't Shut Me Down. During their active years, from 1972 to 1982, 20 singles from ABBA managed to stay on the Billboard Hot.
